ABOUT THE DIALOGUE

Are you ready to embark on a journey of knowledge, insight, and empowerment? The PIOJ Dialogue for Development Lecture Series is calling, and it's an opportunity you won't want to miss!

Since its inception in 2001, this event has been a source of enlightenment, shaping the discourse around sustainable development in Jamaica. Each year, it delves into crucial topics, bringing together experts, thinkers, and changemakers to explore solutions and ignite progress.

In 2001, Dr Wesley Hughes set the stage with a groundbreaking lecture, "Jamaica: from Creative Adaptation to Sustainable Transformation," based on the findings of the first Human Development Report for Jamaica. His insights were not confined to the lecture hall, but were published, thereby making them widely accessible.

The following years saw the series expand its horizons. Education and gender, sustainable rural development, entrepreneurship, globalization, rural development and tourism, and tax reform are all engaging themes that have graced the stage. The lectures have been profound and thought-provoking, leaving an indelible mark on the development landscape.

But this event is more than just a lecture series; it's a participatory journey. It engages civil society, giving you a voice in matters that shape our nation's future. And the knowledge shared doesn't end with the applause; it's publicly available for all to access, creating a ripple effect of awareness and empowerment.

As we approach the upcoming Dialogue for Development Lecture, under the theme "Beyond 60: Evolving, Innovating, Inspiring", we invite you to be part of this transformative experience. Join us online, where the wisdom of the past meets the potential of the future. Engage with experts, share your insights, and become a driving force for change.

Don't miss this opportunity to be part of a legacy that's been shaping Jamaica's development narrative for over two decades.
